Automatic Forex Trading Systems

It is very popular among expert forex traders to use automatic forex trading systems, if not with their main forex trading account, with other trading accounts; some of them even have multiple forex trading accounts each run a different automatic forex trading system.

So what are automatic forex trading systems?

Automatic forex trading systems are a combination of 3 elements, a forex account, trading platform (usually Meta trader 4) and a forex robot (or known as forex expert adviser). The forex robot will be attached to your trading platform that is attached to your forex trading account, and then the robot will analyze the signals of a currency pair you choose and automatically trade on your behalf. The robot can detect signals and changes with these signals, and then it will open a deal (buying or selling) then when the deal makes some profits it will close the deal also automatically.

Why would expert forex traders use automatic forex trading systems?

While most of us think that only new forex traders are using automatic forex trading systems because they don't have the experience and knowledge to control their own trading process and maximize the potential of profits from forex, the truth is that the highest percent of automatic forex trading systems users are experts on forex trading and they are already making thousands of dollars daily from the forex.

So why do they use these systems?

Simply for more profits, Greed you can call it; but the bottom line is that they maximize the potential of making money by running multiple trading accounts, and they trade on the forex market more than 100% of the time, not losing any profitable signal that could accrue while they are offline.

I can consider myself as an expert with forex trading because I make five figures a month with it; I make most of my profits from manual trading but also run multiple automatic forex trading systems with 2 forex brokers only. The systems all together make for me a net profit of more than $500 every single day.

I do recommend automatic forex trading systems for every forex trader, new and experts as well, it's a good way to maximize your profits from forex trading, and wisely control the risk of losing money with forex trading.

The one problem with automatic forex trading systems is to find a good performance forex robot, when there are hundreds of forex robots on the market and most of them (more than 80%) are worthless, to find the right forex robot that can trade with your automatic system and generate profits for you, you need to test some of them.

Here is a very professional review of the top performing forex robots on the market.

I really recommend testing them, start with one robot and run it for 2 weeks and see how it works, if you want better performance try to test another.

Good robots will at least double your account balance within 2 weeks, but you must not interfere with its process.

Automatic forex trading systems have proven success for most of their users, but only when they set it accordingly, so if you are serious about being involve with forex trading and try to get your share from this multibillion dollar industry, you need to setup a good automatic trading system.
